No Impact to flight operations as a result of localized electrical cable failure at St. John's International Airport

For Saturday, March 9, 2019 at 7pm

A localized electrical cable failure at St. John's International Airport that occurred this morning was repaired by 6:30pm, resulting in no impact to flight operations.

The localized electrical cable failure was discovered this morning, and the Airport Authority electrical team began to immediately complete the repairs. The airfield lighting systems were shut down to safely conduct the repairs and to prevent any further damage. These electrical repairs were completed and airfield lighting systems were returned to service in-time to accommodate evening flight operations.
